DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kasuya et al. (US 2006/0154020). Kasuya et al. disclose a nonwoven base fabric comprising multifilament yarns using composite yarns [0021]. The composite yarns can be in the form of core-sheath and sea islands [0020]. Preferably, the yarns comprise a combination of polypropylene polymer (i.e. core) serving as the high melting point polymer and polyethylene (i.e. sheath) as a low melting point polymer [0022]. The polypropylene core portion has a melting point of 165° C and the polyethylene sheath portion has a melting point of 90° C [0040]. As seen in Example 1, the multifilament has a denier of 680d and is made up of 60 filaments [0040].

Regarding the teaching that the yarn is laminated in at least the warp, slant, and reverse slant direction, it is the examiner's position that the base fabric of Kasuya et al. is identical to or only slightly different than the presently claimed fabric prepared by the method of the claim(s), because both fabrics are nonwovens made of composite yarns comprising a polypropylene core and polyethylene sheath having the claimed melting points and claims dtex. Even though product-by-process claims are limited by and defined by the process, determination of patentability is based on the product itself. The patentability of a product does not depend on its method of production.

If the product in the product-by-process claim is the same as or obvious from a product of the prior art, the claim is unpatentable even though the prior product was made by a different process. In re Thorpe, 227 USPQ 964, 966 (Fed. Cir. 1985). The burden has been shifted to the applicant to show unobvious differences between the claimed product and the prior art product. In re Marosi, 218 USPQ 289, 292 (Fed. Cir. 1983). The Kasuya patent either anticipates or strongly suggests the claimed subject matter. It is noted that if the applicant intends to rely on Examples in the specification or in a submitted Declaration to show non-obviousness, the applicant should clearly state how the Examples of the present invention are commensurate in scope with the claims and how the Comparative Examples are commensurate in scope with the fabric of Kasuya.
